

Winter Student Assistantships in Digital Media Support and Production

Objective

NSCAD University continues to be highly committed to offering state of the art digital learning through the design and delivery of over 160 winter courses, starting January 2021. These courses will be developed by NSCAD faculty with the assistance of NSCAD staff, instructional designers, and the selected student assistants.

The preparation of these courses will afford a unique opportunity for students to learn, apprentice and apply next wave digital professional skills, which will greatly enhance their educational experience and potential for participation in the creative digital economy. Non-credit courses and workshops will also be offered in the Winter term, which may require the support of Digital Media student assistants.

Learning Outcomes

Students will:

- Understand the context of digital learning and course design/development;
- Acquire skills and capabilities in technical support of digital learning, including Brightspace support, video production, sound, lighting, graphic design, animation and visual presentation;
- Learn to work effectively in multidisciplinary teams, which include academic specialists, instructional designers and technical specialists, through discussion and collaborative development

Hours of Work

$18/hr for 10 hrs/week for 17 weeks in the winter (January 4 - April 30).

Student eligibility criteria
